

ABSTRACT

The invention includes a technique to automatically learn control sequences of a set of computer application programs. The invention makes use of a data structure into which control sequences from a set of computer application programs can be loaded. The data structure may then be used by other applications to execute the learned control sequences.

00000000000000000000000000000000